

Buy dad some cool new tools

Whether you've got a handy man, a gadget freak or a dad with dreams of DIY, there are plenty of cool tools to add to his arsenal. Here are some Father's Day favorites:

Fold away work bench

If your home is like ours, available space is at a premium. This folding workbench and tool storage center is a well built gadget, as space-efficient as a workshop can get. Heavy steel brackets are used to mount a real butcher block bench top at any height you like. Once mounted it provides a full 60-inch wide by 24-inch deep work surface that folds down and out of the way when not in use.

An accompanying tool storage center is made of heavy plastic with a "slat board"

ON THE HOUSE

MORRIS CAREY
& JAMES CAREY

design — more versatile than old-fashioned peg board. For about $550, the kit includes the work bench and tool center and a package of assorted slat board hooks and tool holders.

Source: www.2BenchSolution.com

Pocket screwdriver

This miniature screwdriver is about the size of a half dollar and it has four blades. And get this — it's sold as a key-chain fob. The inventor added a special twist that makes his tool more useful than all of the other multi-tip screwdrivers that we've ever seen.

Tips include a typical No. 2 Phillips head and a standard straight blade. It sells for less than $3.

Source: www.advantekmarketing.com

Four-pod faux leather charging station

For gadget fiends, we discovered a neat little gadget that doubles as a Father's Day gift and as a housekeeping problem solver.

The charging station is nothing more than a sharp looking faux-leather container that conceals your plug strip, chargers and wires while it cradles up to four items for charging.

The price is right too, at only $20.

Source: cableorganizer.com

